A heavy hail storm last week passed over the region six miles south of Columbus. Stones as large as a hen egg fell. Those of the size of partridge eggs were frequent. Leaves of trees were beaten off, and limbs broken. The corn and cotton in many places were badly pelted.

The Columbus Sun says all the young gentlemen of that city who have been kicked by maids or widows since the war "are to meet in a private room next Monday night for the purpose of organizing a club for mutual diversion. It is to be called the "slipper Club," from the fact that no one is to be admitted who has not enjoyed the pleasure of receiving one. A president, secretary and treasurer have already been agreed upon. Each person who becomes a member must deposit with the treasurer, to be placed among the archives, to be recalled; s' pleasure, all pictures, touching letters, and guising notes. The meetings are to be diversitied by narrations, brief and pointed, either written or oral, of the courtship of each member. The tenderer they are, or the funnier, the better. Solemn ouths of secresy are to be administered.

Our Augusta exchanges contain interesting accounts of the presentation by the Catholics of that city to Father Ryan of some tokens of their esteem and affection on the eve of his departure for Europe. Mr. P. Walsh, upon the part of married men, presented the distinguished prelate with a purse containing a considerable sum of money. Mr. P. F. Dunne, on behalf of the young men, presented him with a gold pen and pencil case, a silver match box, and a check for a handsome amount. Purses were also presented by Master T. Cleary, for the Society of St. Aloysius, and by Miss D. Costello, for the Sodality of the Immaculate conception. Father Ryan responded to each presentation speech in that eloquent, appropriate and inimitable manner peculiar to himself. Appropriate resolutions, expressive of the feeling of his congregation at his departure, were presented to him.

The contract between the city authorities of Macon and Colonel John T. Sneed, secretary and general agent of the Armory Manufacturing Company, was legally closed on Friday. This arrangement secures for the city another strong manufacturing enterprise. The capital stock of the company is $500,000. The city has conveyed to the association land to the amount of 23½ acres, which includes the armory buildings and other improvements: The consideration received is stock certificates to the amount of $75,000, to be issued to the dity. The balance of the stock $425,000—ls

The consideration received is stock certificates to the amount of $75,000, to be issued to the city. The balance of the stock—$425,000—is paid up; consequently the company starts with buildings far advanced toward completion, and the ample space of grounds paid for, and a cash capital to prosecute further improvements of $425,000. The company designs to proceed at once with the work of repairing the buildings and placing the machinery. The latter will comprise work for the manufacture of cotton and woollen fabrics, yarns, &c.

REVIVAL OF THE COTTON TRADE. [From the Manchester Observer.] Day by day we are being furnished with most satisfactory evidence that the long period of the depression and disaster which has paralyzed the energies of those engaged in the cotton manufacture in this kingdom is at last drawing to a close. Most encouraging reports are being received from the major parts of our foreign markets in which our calicose are discosed of while the learn terms of the learn ter are being received from the major parts of our foreign markets in which our calicoes are disposed of, while the large increase which has taken place in the supply of the raw material from the United States of America this year has effectually checked that reckiess speculation in raw cotton which has been the bane of the trade for several years past, and which has rendered spinning and manufacturing as uncertain and unsatisfactory as a game with the dice-box. To judge from the accounts we receive from the cotton districts in Lancashire, manufacturers would appear to be very well in orders. The profit in prospect perhaps is not what would be desired, but it is a hopeful sign for the future that notwithstanding the large business that has been done in Manchester during the past few weeks, the tone of the Liverpool market remains quiet and subdued. The latest intelligence received from the cotton-growing States of the Union all tends to confirm this feeling. The aggregate receipts at the American ports of last season's crop up to the middle of April show a very large increase compared with those for any year since the outbreak of the Southern rebellion. From the last of September, 1869, to the 15th of last month, these receipts amounted to 2,488,867 bales, against 1,906,125 for the same period in 1868-9, being an increase this season over last season of no less than 582,742 bales. Such a trifie as a straw, according to the old adage, is sufficient to show how the wind blows, and one or two comparatively unimportant incidents which have recently taken place in regard to trade prospects. At the recently occurred in Lancashire indicate the great change of feeling which has recently taken place in regard to trade prospects. At the last Easter festivities in several towns the holidays of the workpeople have been curtailed, from the anxiety of the master spinners and manfacturers to get on with their work; indeed, at Blackburn, one large employer was constrained to make an example of some of his operatives who would persist in holiday making. Seventeen of his spinners were brought before the magistrates and fined five shillings each for absenting themselves from gs each for absenting themselves from shillings each for absenting themselves from their work without leave for half a day on Easter Wednesday. The economy of a modern cotton manufactory can ill afford to be disarranged by mistimed holiday making, as was established in this case, for it appeared that the idleness of these seventeen spinners had caused the loss of a day's work to five times the number of power-loom weavers. Another evidence that the hard times in the cotton manufacturing districts are at an end, is the fact that the operatives are concerting measevidence that the hard times in the cotton manufacturing districts are at an end, is the fact that the operatives are concerting measures for the "general advance in the rate of wages. A general reduction o. from ten to fifteen there cent. took place during the cotton famine, and this the workpeople look forward to recovering. If trade continues brisk we have no doubt whatever they will be successful. The Lancashire employer, when prosperous, seldom grudges to share that prosperity with his workpeople, and we hope that country may be spared any of those embltyered disputes about wages which are so disastrous to both employer and employed. But perhaps the most satisfactory proof we can have of the return of prosperity to Lancashire may be found in the daily increasing value of mills and mill property. It is difficult to convey to those who reside out of the cotton manufacturing districts a fair conception of the great depreciation which has taken place in the value of this class of property during the past five or six years. In a letter recently addressed by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce to an eminent French firm, we find the following cases quoted, and we can fally confirm the remark that. Ancashire we find the following cases quoted, and we can fully confirm the remark that Lancashire could furnish but too many examples of the same class:—"(a.) A manufacturer, now deceased, who was largely engaged in business. considered that when his affairs were wound that the same results have a subspace of $20,000. considered that when his affairs were would up there would be left a balance of £30,000, which he bequeathed by will to his family, and upon that sum the legacy duty was paid; but, when his mill property was sold, there was not sufficient to pay his trading debts. (b.) Anog ther manufacturer who had mill property (said to be worth £40,000.) and was possessed of a freehold estate in land of the value of £17,000, found hispatics for the walker of £18,000.

in mill property in Lancashire recently report-ed to us, indicate, however, that there is al-ready a very marked improvement in its value. -In the Presbyterian General Assembly at In the Presbyterian General Assembly at Louisville on Saturday, the majority report of the Judicial Committee on the overture from Montgomery, Alabama, was adopted. This would seem to give but little prospect of rengion, as one resolution requires a purgation of all their "errors of political utterances deliberately pronounced year after year." The report of the Committee on Negatives presents a very favorable report of the state of religion within the bounds of the Southern church.

found himself so far divested of funds for conducting his business that he had recourse to Dorrowing from his bankers, with whom he deposited the deeds of his property (by way of security) for £25,000. The landed property cannot be supposed to have failen in value, yet it is now deemed questionable whether both estates (when sold) will more than cover the claim of the bankers." Some transactions in mill property in Langachies recently report.
